"Let's to the Capitol."—Shakespeare, "Coriolanus," Act iv, Scene

"See yond' coign o' the Capitol, yond' corner-stone?"—Same, Ac Scene 4.

"In fancy now, beneath the twilight gloom,
Come, let me lead thee o'er this 'second Rome,'
Where Tribunes rule, where dusky Davi bow,
And what was Goose Creek once is Tiber now;
This embryo Capital, where fancy sees
Squares in morasses, obelisks in trees;
Which second-sighted seers even now adorn
With shrines unbuilt and heroes yet unborn."

THE CAPITOL IN 1814, FROM PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE.

The city is divided into the Northwest, Northeast, Southeast, and Southwest quarters by imaginary lines drawn North and South and East and West through the center of the Capitol, and from this center the streets and buildings are lettered and numbered.

It is worthy of note that Mr. Edward Clark, architect of the Capitol, has held that office for more than a quarter of a century, having been appointed in 1865. His immediate predecessor, Mr. Thomas U. Walter, was appointed in 1851.

In the course of an address at a recent public meeting, an official of high position and character remarked, in substance, that during his nearly thirty years of official life in Washington, he had met here visitors from every civilized land, and that all of them, perhaps without exception, in speaking of the Capitol, had pronounced it the noblest and most beautiful public building of modern times.

THE LAYING OF THE CORNER-STONE.

The following account of the ceremonies of laying the corner-stone of the Capitol is copied from the book entitled "The Lodge of Washington; a history of the Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, A. F. and A. M., of Alexandria, Va.," compiled from the original records of the Lodge, by Past Master F. L. Brockett, and published in 1876. The included quotation credited to "the newspapers of that day" is substantially the report published in the Columbian Mirror and Alexandria Gazette of September 25, 1793. After giving an account of the erection of the southeast corner-stone of the District of Columbia, on the 15th of April 1791, the history above named says:

"The next important event of this kind was the laying of the corner-stone of the United States Capitol, at the city of Washington, on the eighteenth day of September, 1793. The Masonic ceremonies were conducted by His Excellency, General Washington, President of the United States, a Past Master of this Lodge, which was present and holding the post of honor. Dr. Dick, elected Worshipful Master in 1789, still in office, invited Washington to act as Master on this occasion, in accordance with his own wishes and those of the public. The stone was deposited in the southeast corner of the building, instead of the northeast, as is now the custom. The inscription on the plate stated that Alexandria Lodge, No. 22, of Virginia, was present and participated in the ceremonies. The apron and sash worn by Washington on this occasion were the handiwork of Mrs. General La Fayette, and are now the property of this Lodge."

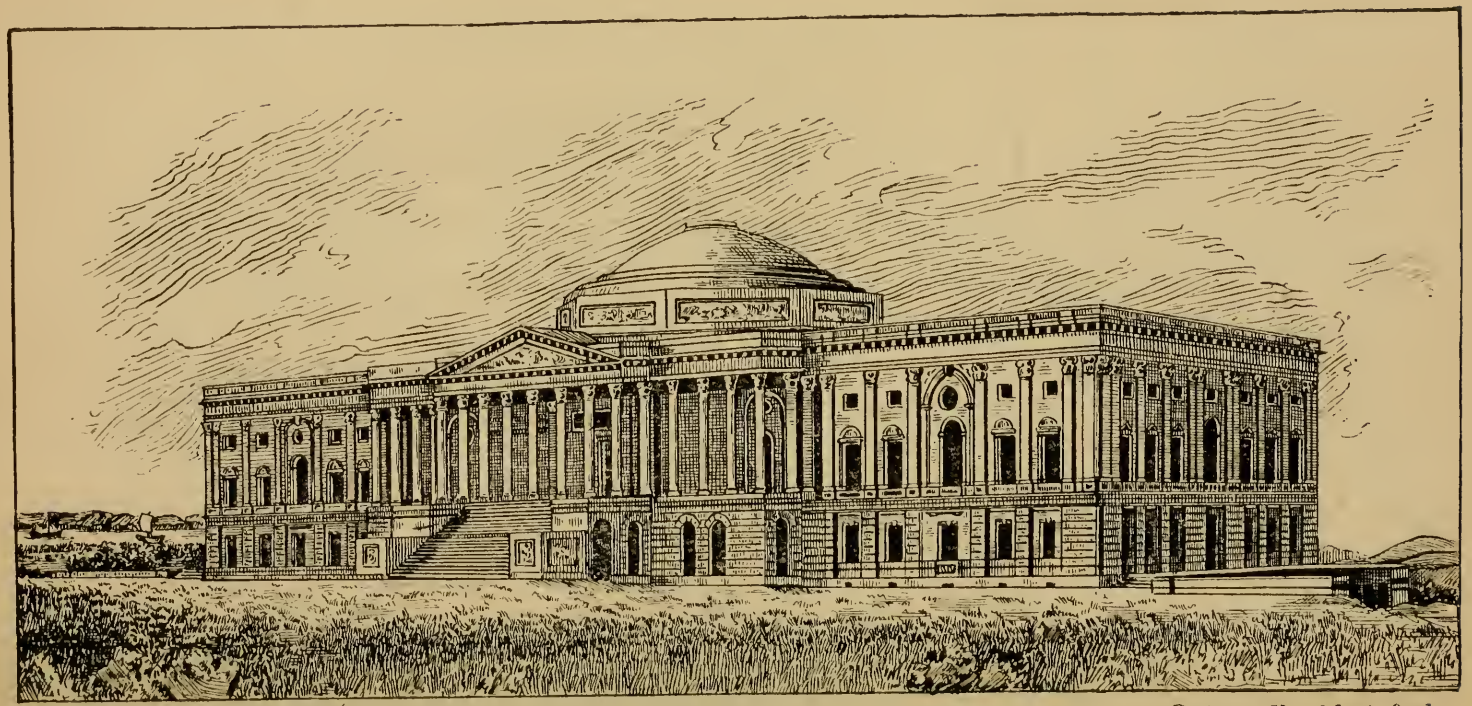
The following account of the ceremonies was published in the newspapers of that day:

"On Wednesday, one of the grandest Masonic processions took place, for the purpose of laying the corner-stone of the Capitol of the United States, which, perhaps, was ever exhibited on the like important occasion. About ten o'clock Lodge No. 9 was visited by that congregation so graceful to the craft, Lodge No. 22, of Virginia, with all their officers and regalia; and directly afterward appeared on the southern bank of the Grand River Potomack, one of the finest companies of volunteer artillery that has been lately seen, parading to receive the President of the United States, who shortly came in sight with his suite, to whom the artillery paid their military honors; and His Excellency and suite crossed the Potomack, and was received in Maryland by the officers and brethren of No. 22, Virginia, and No. 9, Maryland, whom the President headed, preceded by a band of music; the rear brought up by the Alexandria Volunteer Artillery, with grand solemnity of march, proceeded to the President's Square, in the city of Washington, where they were met and saluted by No. 15, of the city of Washington, in all their elegant badges and clothing, headed by Bro. Joseph Clarke, R. W. Grand Master, p. t., and conducted to a large lodge, prepared for the purpose of their reception. After a short space of time, by the vigilance of Bro. Clotworthy Stephenson, Grand Marshal, p. t., the brotherhood and other bodies were disposed in a second order of procession, which took place amid a brilliant crowd of spectators of both sexes, according to the following arrangement, viz.,

"The Surveying Department of the city of Washington.

"Mayor and Corporation of Georgetown.

"Virginia Artillery.



Detournelle del et Sculp.

The Capitol - Washington 1816.

"Commissioners of the city of Washington, and their attendants.

"Stone-cutters, mechanics.

"The Sword-bearers.

"Masons of the first degree.

"Bible, etc., on grand cushions.

"Deacons, with staffs of office.

"Masons of the second degree.

"Stewards, with wands.

"Masons of the third degree.

"Wardens, with truncheons.

"Secretaries, with tools of office.

"Past Masters, with their regalia.

"Treasurers, with their jewels.

"Band of music.

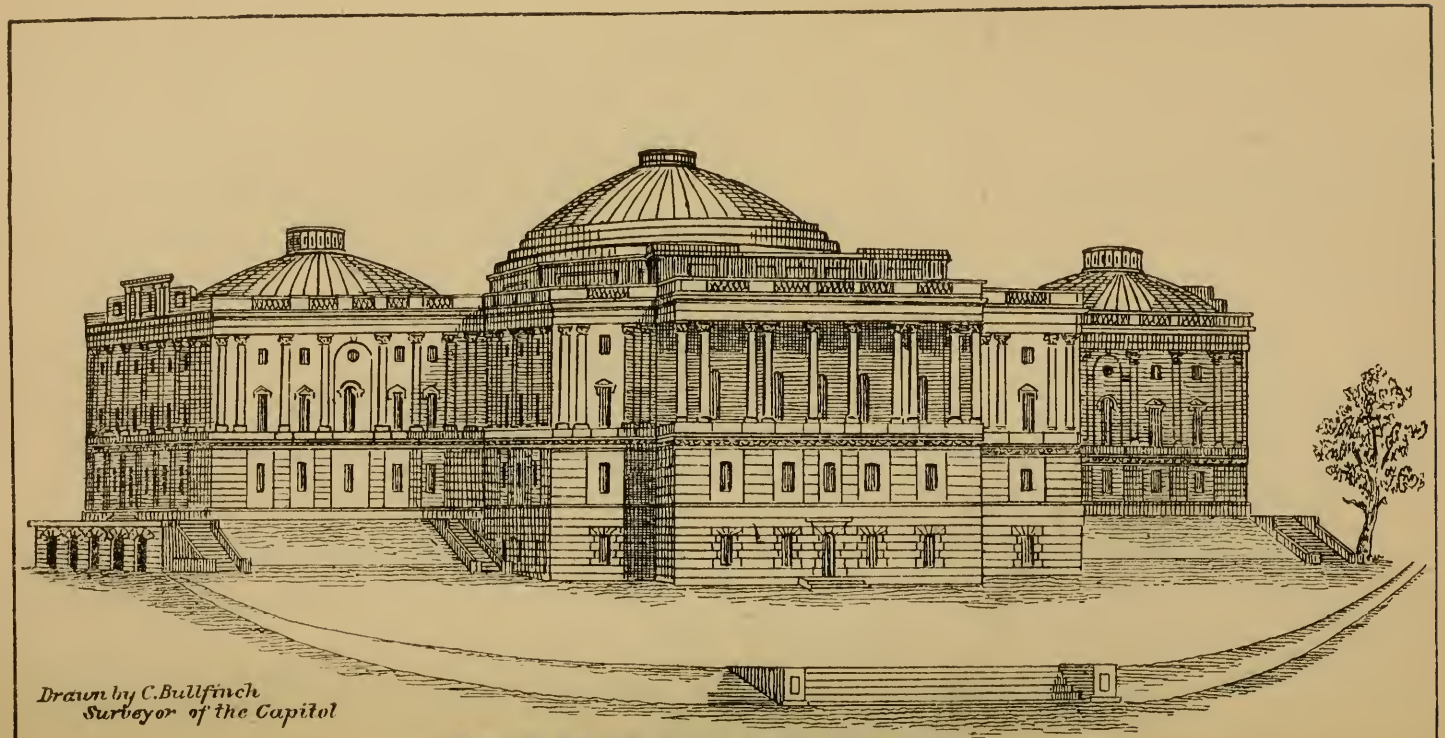
"Lodge No. 22, of Virginia, disposed in their own order.

"Corn, wine, and oil.

"Grand Master, pro tem., Brother George Washington, and Worshipful Master of No. 22, of Virginia.

"Grand Sword-bearer.

"The procession marched two abreast, in the greatest solemn dignity, with music playing, drums beating, colors flying, and spectators rejoicing, from the President's Square to the Capitol, in the city of Washington, where the Grand Master ordered a halt, and directed each file in the procession to incline two steps, one to the right and one to the left, and face each other, which formed a hollow, oblong square through which the Grand Sword-bearer led the van, followed by the Grand Master, pro tem., on the left, the President of the United States in the centre, and the Worshipful Master of No. 22, Virginia, on the right; all the other orders that composed the procession advanced in the reverse of their order of march from the President's Square to the southeast corner of the Capitol, and the artillery filed off to a destined ground to display their maneuvers and discharge their cannon. The President of the United States, the Grand Master, pro tem., and the Worshipful Master of No. 22, taking their stand to the east of a large stone, and all the craft forming a circle westward, stood a short time in solemn order. The artillery discharged a volley. The Grand Marshal delivered the Commissioners a large silver plate with an inscription thereon, which the Commissioners ordered to be read, and was as follows:



Drawn by C. Bulfinch
Surveyor of the Capitol

WEST FRONT OF THE CAPITOL
Engraved for the National Calender 1821.

"'This southeast corner-stone of the Capitol of the United States of America, in the city of Washington, was laid on the eighteenth day of September, 1793, in the thirteenth year of American Independence, in the first year of the second term of the presidency of George Washington, whose virtues in the civil administration of his country have been as conspicuous and beneficial as his military valor and prudence have been useful in establishing her liberties, and in the year of Masonry 5793, by the President of the United States, in concert with the Grand Lodge of Maryland, several lodges under its jurisdiction, and Lodge No. 22, from Alexandria, Va., Thomas Johnson, David Steuart, and Daniel Carroll, Commissioners; Joseph Clark, R. W. Grand Master, pro tem.; Joseph Hoban and Stephen Hallate, architects; Collin Williamson, master mason.'

"The artillery discharged a volley. The plate was then delivered to the President, who, attended by the Grand Master, pro tem., and three Most Worshipful Masters, descended to the cavazion trench and deposited the plate and laid it on the corner-stone of the Capitol of the United States of America, on which were deposited corn, wine, and oil, when the whole congregation joined in reverential prayer, which was succeeded by Masonic chanting honors and a volley from the artillery.

"The President of the United States and his attendant brethren ascended from the cavazion to the east of the corner-stone and there the Grand Master, pro tem., elevated on a triple rostrum, delivered an oration fitting the occasion, which was received with brotherly love and commendation. At intervals during the delivery of the oration several volleys were discharged by the artillery. The ceremony ended in prayer, Masonic chanting honors, and a fifteen-volley from the artillery.

"The whole company retired to an extensive booth, where an ox of 500 pounds' weight was barbecued, of which the company generally partook, with every abundance of other recreation. The festival concluded with fifteen successive volleys from the artillery, whose military discipline and maneuvers merit every commendation. Before dark the whole company departed with joyful hopes of the production of their labor."

The second session of the 6th Congress convened November 17, 1800, in the north wing. On this occasion, in his opening speech, President John Adams said:

"I congratulate the people of the United States on the assembling of Congress at the permanent seat of their government; and I congratulate you, gentlemen, on the prospect of a residence not to be exchanged. It would be unbecoming the representatives of this nation, to assemble for the first time in this solemn temple, without looking up to the Supreme Ruler of the universe, and imploring His blessing. It is with you, gentlemen, to consider whether the local powers over the District of Columbia, vested by the Constitution in Congress of the United States, shall be immediately exercised.

CAPITOL.
West Front
1830.

If, in your opinion, this important trust ought now to be executed, you cannot fail, while performing it, to take into view the future probable situation of the territory, for the happiness of which you are about to provide. You will consider it as the capital of a great nation, advancing with unexampled rapidity in arts, in commerce, in wealth, and in population, and possessing within itself those resources, which, if not thrown away or lamentably misdirected, will secure to it a long course of prosperity and self-government."

The Senate in their reply, said:

"We meet you, sir, and the other branch of the national legislature, in the city which is honored by the name of our late hero and sage, the illustrious Washington, with sensations and emotions which exceed our power of description."

The House of Representatives in reply, said:

"The final establishment of the Seat of National Government, which has now taken place in the District of Columbia, is an event of no small importance in the political transactions of our country. Nor can we, on this occasion, omit to express a hope that the spirit which animated the great founder of this city, may descend to future generations; and that the wisdom, magnanimity, and steadiness which marked the events of his public life may be imitated in all succeeding ages. A consideration of those powers which have been vested in Congress over the District of Columbia, will not escape our attention; nor shall we forget that in exercising those powers a regard must be had to those events which will necessarily attend the capital of America."

EXTRACTS FROM WEBSTER'S ADDRESS

at the laying of the corner-stone of the addition to the Capitol July 4, 1851:

"Fellow-citizens:

"I congratulate you, I give you joy, on the return of the anniversary, and I felicitate you, also, on the more particular purpose of which this ever memorable day has been chosen to witness the fulfillment. * * This is the New World! This is America! This is Washington! And this the Capital of the United States! And where else, among the nations, can the seat of Government be surrounded on any day of any year by those who have more reason to rejoice in the blessings which they possess?

* * * "Who does not feel that when President Washington laid his hand on the foundation of the first Capitol building he performed a great work of perpetuation of the Union and the Constitution? Who does not feel that this seat of the general Government, healthful in its situation, central in its position, near the mountains from whence gush fresh springs of wonderful virtue, teeming with natures richest products, and yet not far from the bays and the great estuaries of the sea, easily accessible and generally agreeable in climate and association, does give strength to the union of these States? * * * With each succeeding year new interest is added to the spot.

* * * "Fellow citizens, what contemplations are awakened in our minds as we assemble here to re-enact a scene like that performed by Washington! Methinks I see his venerable form now before me as presented in the glorious statue by Houdon, now in the capital of Virginia. He is dignified and grave; but concern and anxiety seem to soften the linaments of his countenance. The government over which he presides is yet in the crisis of experiment. Not free from troubles at home, he sees the world in commotion and in arms all around him. He sees that imposing foreign powers are half disposed to try the strength of the recently-established American government. We perceive that mighty thoughts mingled with fears as well as with hopes, are struggling within him. He heads a short procession over these, the naked fields; he crosses yonder stream on a fallen tree; he ascends to the top of this eminence, whose original oaks of the forest stand as thick around him as if the spot had been devoted to Druidical worship, and here he performs the appointed duty of the day.

* * * "You stand where he stood. * * Changed, changed is everything around. The same sun indeed shone upon his head which now shines upon yours. The same broad river rolled at his feet, and bathes his last resting place, that now rolls at yours. But the site of this city was then mainly an open field. Streets and avenues have since been laid out and completed, squares and public grounds enclosed and ornamented, until the city which bears his name, although comparatively inconsiderate in numbers and wealth, has become quite fit to be the seat of government of a great and united people."

Extracts from the document deposited in the corner-stone of the extension July 4, 1851:

"If it shall hereafter be the will of God that this structure shall fall from its base; that its foundation be upturned and this deposit brought to the eyes of men, be it then known that on this day the Union of the United States of America stands firm; that their constitution still exists unimpaired and with all its original usefulness and glory, growing every day stronger and stronger in the affections of the great body of the American people and attracting more and more the admiration of the world. And all here assembled, whether belonging to public life or to private life, with hearts devoutly thankful to Almighty God for the preservation of the liberty and happiness of the country, unite in sincere and fervent prayers that this deposit and the walls and arches, the domes and towers, the columns and entablatures now to be erected over it, may endure forever! God save the United States of America!

"DANIEL WEBSTER,
"Secretary of State of the United States."

THE MOVEMENT FOR THE CELEBRATION

of the centennial anniversary of laying the corner-stone of the Capitol originated in a motion introduced in the meeting of the East Washington Citizens' Association September 3, 1891, by Mr. M. I. Weller, requesting the Executive Committee of the Association to inquire and report in regard to celebrating the centennial anniversaries of this and other certain occasions of interest and importance in 1892–3, which motion was unanimously adopted. The Executive Committee reported on the 5th of November, 1891, in favor of celebrating the Capitol centennial and the report was adopted and the committee requested to prepare a plan for the celebration. On the 4th of May, 1893, the committee reported to the Association an outline plan. The report was adopted and the committee was "authorized and requested to call, or cause to be called, a meeting of citizens of the District to further consider and act upon the matter." Thereupon the committee waited upon the Commissioners of the District and in a written memorial requested them to call such a meeting.

The Commissioners issued the call by publication in the daily papers and the meeting was accordingly held at Willard's Hall on the evening of Wednesday, June 7, and was attended by a number of leading citizens. District Commissioner John W. Ross was chosen chairman and Mr. M. I. Weller secretary. Brief, earnest, and pointed speeches were made by Commissioner Ross, Commissioner M. M. Parker, Rt. Rev. Dr. Keane, rector of the Catholic University, Mr. John W. Babson, President of the East Washington Citizens' Association, Gen. Cyrus Bussey, last Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Mr. John Joy Edson, Hon. Beriah Wilkins, of The Washington Post, Hon. Simon Wolf, and Mr. A. R. Spofford, Librarian of Congress, and short remarks by other gentlemen. The meeting decided that the celebration should be held and that the chairman should select a General Committee of fifty members, with himself as chairman, to conduct the preparations. Commissioner Ross was compelled by press of public duties to decline the chairmanship, but he selected the General Committee, which, after the filling of a few vacancies caused by resignation, was constituted as hereinafter named, and this committee elected as its chairman Mr. Lawrence Gardner, who appointed the other committees named herein, and established headquarters at 419 Tenth street, northwest.

CHECKS and SPECIAL PRESENTS.

WE have been conducting business so long in this city that all the residents realize the advantages secured through dealing with us when they want First Quality Coffee, High Grade Tea, Unadulterated Baking Powder, Pure Spices, Full Strength Flavoring Extracts, Healthy Condensed Milk, and the Very Best Sugar at the lowest possible—prices that are marvels at times. To-day we quote:

Eight O'Clock Breakfast Coffee.....25c
Java and Mocha Brands.....33, 35, 38c
Our Special Tea—Thea-Nectar.....60c
Condensed Milk.....16c

Every day adds newcomers to the population of the city. If they come from cities of any size they are familiar with our business methods and know that we share profits with our patrons by giving checks and special presents—especially on Tea and Baking Powder.

The sketch exhibits the exact location of Hamburgh and Carrollsburg, and the approximated metes and bounds of every estate then embraced within the grounds designated by the President.
In addition thereto the subsequent Avenues as well as several other early improvements, viz. Roads surveys bridges &c. are indicated by dotted lines, and the owners of some estates in the direct vicinity are given, so as to facilitate the location of present sites in their relation to former estates and thus to complete the most perfect illustration of the historical antecedents of the present topographical features of our National Capital...
